Abstract: This article discusses the origins of Islam, the foundations of its formation as a religion, its current role and problems. The more we understand Islam, the more perfect and beautiful our lives will be. The principles that underpin spiritual, moral, and intellectual growth in Islamic teachings hold a significant place in shaping human life. These foundations are derived from the Qur'anic verses, the traditions of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), and the perspectives of Muslim philosophers. The article examines concepts such as justice, wisdom, free will, and a sense of responsibility, which serve as guiding principles for elevating individuals and society. The author highlights the relevance of Islamic values in universal ethics and their harmony with modern philosophical thought, showcasing the Islamic approach to understanding the meaning and purpose of human life. The article affirms the enduring significance of Islamic philosophical principles in contemporary contexts, emphasizing their potential to foster a stable and just society.

INTRODUCTION

Islam is a set of divine religious laws revealed by Allah through the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH). This religious culture, collected in many sacred books, has developed over a period of 1400 years. The religion of Islam teaches that by believing in Allah, its laws, and the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), one can serve to achieve happiness in this world and the hereafter. The three main sources of Islam are the Quran, the Sunnah, and the Hadith. The Quran, the divine words of Allah, revealed through the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), is the pillar for every Muslim and is the foundation of the Islamic religion. The Sunnah represents the practices that developed based on the life and sayings of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH). Hadiths are the sayings and deeds of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH). The religion of Islam, as described, consists of basic deeds such as faith, prayer, fasting, zakat, and charity. Through these deeds, a person draws closer to Allah and is saved from darkness, evil, and destruction. The religion of Islam includes indicators that are contrary to human health, goodness, and respect.

Islamic philosophy - This is a development in philosophy that is distinguished by its affiliation with the Islamic tradition. In Arabic, there are two terms that are translated into Latin as "philosophy", and they refer to "philosophy", which, along with philosophy, also includes logic, mathematics and physics, and "the science of speech"; This refers to the science that aims to prove religious beliefs with logical arguments.

The main sources of classical or early Islamic philosophy are the Islamic religion itself (especially ideas derived and interpreted from the Quran) as well as pre-Islamic Indian philosophy, along with Greek philosophy, which was inherited by the early Muslims as a result of the conquests. Philosophy and Persian Philosophy. Many early philosophical discussions focused on the harmony of religion and reason embodied in Greek philosophy.

The concept of philosophy in Islam

The closest word to the word philosophy is the word "hikmat", which is used in the main Islamic texts (the Quran and Sunnah). That is why we find many Muslim philosophers using the word "wisdom" as a synonym. For the word "philosophy", which entered Arab-Islamic thought. The word "philosophy" is Greek and consists of two Greek syllables: "philien" meaning "to love" and "sophia" meaning "wisdom". There are several definitions of philosophy for Muslim philosophers, including as al-Kindi said: And if in the context of Islamic civilization the word philosophy has become associated with the concepts of Greco-Western philosophy, then if we try to speak of Islamic philosophy in a general sense as a universal understanding and study of the nature of life, we must include the following.

Early Islamic philosophy began in the second century of the Islamic calendar (early 9th century CE) with Yaqub ibn Ishaq al-Kindi and ended with Ibn Rushd in the sixth century of the Hijri calendar (late 12th century CE), largely coinciding with the same period. With the period known as the Golden Age for Islam. Ibn Rushd's death marked the end of a particular branch of Islamic philosophy, usually called the Arab Peripatetic school, and in western Islamic countries such as Andalusia and North Africa.

Islamic philosophy continued to flourish in the Eastern Islamic countries, particularly in the Safavid Persian state and the Ottoman and Mongol empires, with many schools of philosophy including Avicenna (related to Ibn Sina), Rushdism (related to Ibn Sina), Illuminist philosophy, and Sufi philosophy, the philosophy of transcendental wisdom, and the philosophy of Isfahan.

The term "Islamic philosophy" refers to the philosophy produced in the Islamic world, and it is a general term that can be defined and used in various ways. This term broadly refers to the Islamic worldview, derived from Islamic texts regarding the creation of the universe and the will of the Creator. In other words, it refers to any school of learning that flourished during the Islamic Empire or during the Arab-Islamic culture and Islamic civilization. In a narrow sense, the word philosophy is a translation of Philosophia, which refers to specific schools of thought, many of which were influenced by Greek philosophical approaches such as Platonism and Aristotelianism.

Islamic philosophy is not concerned with religious matters and is not exclusively produced by Muslims. Not all sects in Islam recognize the usefulness or legitimacy of philosophical inquiry. Some argue that there is no indication that human limited knowledge and experience can lead you to the truth. It is also worth noting that "reason" is recognized as a source of law in Islam.

The word "Islam" comes from the Arabic language and means "the true, correct path." The original meaning of this combination is that it represents the rules that are necessary for human life, which cannot be lost, cannot be canceled. Islam is a collection of religions that unites all of these, gives equal destiny and dignity to all people, is considered a law and companion, and is recognized by the unity and transparency of Allah. Islam is a religious system that encompasses many people around the world, commands respect and honor, and brings trust and blessings. Islam influences people in various ways. The teachings of Islam guide and shape the lives of its followers in many ways. First of all, the teachings of Islam teach believers moral values and principles. In Islam, values such as justice, compassion, tolerance, patience, generosity, loyalty, and honesty play an important role among people. These values strengthen relationships between people by regulating interactions in social relationships and help build a peaceful society. The teachings of Islam also contribute to the spiritual development of people. Worship such as prayer, fasting, zakat, and hajj help believers feel close to Allah and strengthen their spiritual world. In addition to worship, reading and understanding the Holy Quran also serves the spiritual development of believers.

The teachings of Islam also influence people's worldview and behavior. Islam teaches us to respect everything that Allah Almighty has created. Therefore, issues such as respect for the environment, animal rights, and respect for each other are included in the teachings of Islam. Therefore, the influence of Islam on believers is quite broad. The teachings of Islam help to develop the moral, spiritual and behavioral qualities of believers and help people to function well in social relations, environmental problems and other areas. Islam is a religious system based on the Quran, which was revealed to the last prophet of Allah, Muhammad (PBUH), and the words and actions of the prophet. Islam offers believers teachings to ensure happiness in this world and the hereafter, to support the moral and spiritual development of people, and to ensure peace in society. The life of the Islamic religion consists of basic teachings such as belief in Allah Almighty, prophets, angels, fate, the afterlife, prayer, fasting, zakat, pilgrimage, and other acts of worship. The fundamental belief in Islam is that there is only one God, the Creator, and that people should worship Him. Islam teaches that people should live in harmony with their creation and follow the moral code set by God. It helps people establish a right relationship with themselves, other people, and all that they have created. In Islam, acts of worship such as prayer, fasting, zakat, and hajj are important for believers to turn to God, strengthen their spiritual world, and educate themselves. These meetings also contribute to the social life of believers and help them to have good relationships with other people. In Islam, spiritual values such as justice, tolerance, compassion, honesty, generosity, and loyalty govern human behavior and play an important role in social relations. In Islam, there is no discrimination between people and everyone is treated equally. Therefore, the direction of the Islamic religion is based on people turning to Allah Almighty, strengthening their spiritual world, behaving in accordance with moral and social values, and applying justice and tolerance. The basic teachings of the Islamic religion help people to organize their lives and live a happy life.

Islam is the main source of religious cultures and social support systems practiced by Muslims around the world. The future role of Islam may depend on several important issues. First, Islam should contribute to important goals such as supporting human rights and freedoms, ensuring international solidarity and stability, and promoting human justice, fairness, and integrity. Secondly, Islam should help people to understand important worldly issues, such as cooperation and solidarity, scientific and technological advancement, the fight against evil and terrorism, the protection of people and nature, the harmony between people and nature, and so on. Islam also recommends goodness and good deeds and teaches human dignity based on avoiding evil, respecting individual and social rights and freedoms, ensuring international harmony and stability, and being at the service of friends and relatives. Islam also plays an important role in the spiritual life of people and includes activities aimed at purifying people's souls, becoming more subtle, further developing social activities, and transforming people in their natural interactions. The future of Islam is very important for society and humanity, and Muslims continue to play a significant role in important developments in the world. Currently, there are 4 ancient copies of the Mushaf known to exist in the Islamic world. One of them is the original copy kept in Medina, and in Islamic sources it is mentioned as "Imam". The second copy is kept in the Kaaba, and the third copy is kept in the Egyptian National Library in Cairo. The fourth is kept in the Museum of the History of the Peoples of Uzbekistan in Tashkent and was transferred to the Muslim Religious Affairs Office of Uzbekistan in early 1989. According to the Pesh Research Center in the US, Islam may become the largest religion in the world by 2070.

The Pesh Center considers Islam to be the world's fastest-growing religion. If demographic growth continues at its current rate, Islam, currently the world's second-largest religion, could become the world's largest religion by the end of the 21st century, with the number of Muslims in the world exceeding that of Christians. The Pesh study estimates the total number of Muslims in the world at 1.6 billion, while the number of Christians is 2.17 billion. According to population growth modeling, by 2050, the number of Christians will reach 2.92 billion, while the Muslim population will reach 2.76 billion. By 2070, Muslims will be the largest population in the world.

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS:

We can summarize our religion by saying that Allah is in our hearts and minds. Islam has left its mark on the art of Muslim countries. In the field of architecture, this process led to the emergence and widespread spread of new types of buildings (mosques, minarets, khanaqahs, madrasas, etc.). We hope that it will serve as one of the first steps for those who have become more deeply acquainted with the world of Islamic law and who will correctly interpret and propagate the secrets of knowledge they have acquired to the next generation. In order to learn our and holy places that glorify our religion. religion perfectly, we must visit shrines
